Some High Scores Made in the Recent Rifle Matches.

The Contest for the Burkhart Medal Regimental Competition-The Site

In one of the best matches ever shot in the history of the District National Guard, Lieut. W. Milton Farrow last night won the Burkhart medal, with a total score of 192 out of a possible 200. The Burkhart medal is awarded the marksman making the highest total score at the four standard distances, 200, 200, 500, and 600 yards. Ten shots are fired at each distance.

Only those riflemen are eligible to this contest who have made a grade of more than 90 per cent at the first match, company, battalion, or regimental, which they shot at each stage. There were ten contestants last night, and they finished with the scores indicated. The first figures given indicate the totals, and the following the scores at the 200, 300, 500, and 600-yard stages respec-

Lieutenant Farrow will retain possession of the Burkhart medal, which is a beautiful specimen of the goldsmith's art, for one year, when it will be again awarded the victor of the annual

At the close of the most successful series of indoor rifle matches in the history of the District National Guard the Second Regiment team, although defeated at the 600-yard stage last Wednesday night, proved the victors of the entire series. By a single point their aggregate score exceeded that of the First Regiment team. Their total was 1,866, that of the First Regiment

The figures are doubly interesting when it is realized that of the four matches at 200, 300, 500, and 600 the First Regiment team won all except that at 200 yards. Here the marksmen from the Second Regiment finished 23 points to the good, and this comfortable margin was what saved them from defeat on account of the really consistently high class shooting by the First Regi-

What might be termed "house-cleaning" preparatory to the annual inspection and muster of the Guard goes on apace. The company commanders are making strenuous efforts to have ordered the discharges of all members of their companies who do not attend drills regularly or take a proper interest in the affairs of the respective commands. The first inspection will be that of the general staff tomorrow night. Then next week one battalion will be inspected nearly every night until the entire task is completed. It is expected that the showing this year will be a great improvement over that of last
